

JOSEPH HENERY HOWE AND
RUTH ANN SMITH HOWE

There are no dates but Joseph Henery Howe and his first wife Caroline Elizabeth Jolly came from England to the United States. She died and was buried at Payson, Utah. Joseph Henery married Ruth Ann Smith Brundage, a daughter of Jackson Osburne and Mary Maria Owens Smith of Wellington, Millard County. Came to Daniel in 1889. Joseph H. Howe died April 1904, and Ruth Ann May 15, 1911, at Daniel.

Joseph Henery Howe, age 30, and his first wife, Caroline Elizabeth Jolly Howe, age 25, sailed on the ship "Germanicus" from Liverpool, England, on the 14th of April 1854. Captain Fales had 200 Saints aboard, including Elder Richard Cook who was in charge. The voyage was rather lengthy so in consequence the boat put in at St. Georges on Grand Caicos (an island north of Florida) for a further supply, date was May 30, 1854. Continuing the voyage from Foruga on June 4, the company had a pleasant voyage to New Orleans where they arrived June 12, 1854.

V BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS

Within two hours after landing at New Orleans, Elder Cook had made engagement with the captain of a steamboat "Uncle Sam," to take them to St. Louis, Mo., for $3.50 each, luggage free and those under 14 years for half price.

Joseph and Carolina crossed the plains with the Kinkead Freight Company starting August 22, 1855. They settled in Payson, Utah, where a son, Joseph Henery Howe, Jr., was born December 18, 1857.

Joseph Sr. moved to Wellington, Millard County, Utah where he later remarried. His second wife was Ruth Ann Smith. She and Joseph Brundage were previously married in Nauvoo, Illinois, and crossed the plains soon after. Joe Brundage disappeared while they were crossing and was never seen again by any member of that company.

Joseph and Ruth Ann lived at Wellington (which was originally nicknamed "sucker town"). It was settled in the early days by a number of outlaws who specialized in stealing cattle from their neighbors. A dispute which arose in regard to the boundary line between Millard and Juab counties was settled by an act of the legislature in favor of Juab county by which Wellington became part of Juab Stake. In the spring of 1885 a number of LDS people from Scipio, Millard County, took up land claims on the Sevier River within the limits of what later became the Wellington Branch and when the Utah Southern Rail Extension was built through the canyon and passed through the little settlement Joseph Howe was employed along with others.

Ruth Ann had one child by Joe Brundage. Her name was Alvira who died at Scipio as a child. Ruth Ann and Joseph Howe and three children, Eliza Ann and Rodolphus, who died at Scipio, and Minnie Clarence.

JOSEPH HENERY HOWE AND
RUTH ANN SMITH HOWE

There are no dates but Joseph Henery Howe and his first wife Caroline Elizabeth Jolly came from England to the United States. She died and was buried at Payson, Utah. Joseph Henery married Ruth Ann Smith Brundage, a daughter of Jackson Osburne and Mary Maria Owens Smith of Wellington, Millard County. Came to Daniel in 1889. Joseph H. Howe died April 1904, and Ruth Ann May 15, 1911, at Daniel.

Joseph Henery Howe, age 30, and his first wife, Caroline Elizabeth Jolly Howe, age 25, sailed on the ship "Germanicus" from Liverpool, England, on the 14th of April 1854. Captain Fales had 200 Saints aboard, including Elder Richard Cook who was in charge. The voyage was rather lengthy so in consequence the boat put in at St. Georges on Grand Caicos (an island north of Florida) for a further supply, date was May 30, 1854. Continuing the voyage from Foruga on June 4, the company had a pleasant voyage to New Orleans where they arrived June 12, 1854.

872

V BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS

Within two hours after landing at New Orleans, Elder Cook had made engagement with the captain of a steamboat "Uncle Sam," to take them to St. Louis, Mo., for $3.50 each, luggage free and those under 14 years for half price.

Joseph and Carolina crossed the plains with the Kinkead Freight Company starting August 22, 1855. They settled in Payson, Utah, where a son, Joseph Henery Howe, Jr., was born December 18, 1857.

Joseph Sr. moved to Wellington, Millard County, Utah where he later remarried. His second wife was Ruth Ann Smith. She and Joseph Brundage were previously married in Nauvoo, Illinois, and crossed the plains soon after. Joe Brundage disappeared while they were crossing and was never seen again by any member of that company.

Joseph and Ruth Ann lived at Wellington (which was originally nicknamed "sucker town"). It was settled in the early days by a number of outlaws who specialized in stealing cattle from their neighbors. A dispute which arose in regard to the boundary line between Millard and Juab counties was settled by an act of the legislature in favor of Juab county by which Wellington became part of Juab Stake. In the spring of 1885 a number of LDS people from Scipio, Millard County, took up land claims on the Sevier River within the limits of what later became the Wellington Branch and when the Utah Southern Rail Extension was built through the canyon and passed through the little settlement Joseph Howe was employed along with others.

Ruth Ann had one child by Joe Brundage. Her name was Alvira who died at Scipio as a child. Ruth Ann and Joseph Howe and three children, Eliza Ann and Rodolphus, who died at Scipio, and Minnie Clarence.

JOSEPH HENERY HOWE AND
RUTH ANN SMITH HOWE

There are no dates but Joseph Henry Howe and his first wife Caroline Elizabeth Jolly came from England to the United States. She died and was buried at Payson, Utah. Joseph Henry married Ruth Ann Smith Brundage, a daughter of Jackson Osburne and Mary Maria Owens Smith of Wellington, Millard County. Came to Daniel in 1889. Joseph H. Howe died April 1904, and Ruth Ann May 15, 1911, at Daniel.

Joseph Henry Howe, age 30, and his first wife, Caroline Elizabeth Jolly Howe, age 25, sailed on the ship "Germanicus" from Liverpool, England, on the 14th of April 1854. Captain Fales had 200 Saints aboard, including Elder Richard Cook who was in charge. The voyage was rather lengthy so in consequence the boat put in at St. Georges on Grand Caicos (an island north of Florida) for a further supply, date was May 30, 1854. Continuing the voyage from Foruga on June 4, the company had a pleasant voyage to New Orleans where they arrived June 12, 1854.

BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS

Within two hours after landing at New Orleans, Elder Cook had made engagement with the captain of a steamboat "Uncle Sam." to take them to St. Louis, Mo., for $3.50 each, luggage free and those under 14 years for half price.

Joseph and Carolina crossed the plains with the Kinkead Freight Company starting August 22, 1855. They settled in Payson, Utah, where a son, Joseph Henry Howe, Jr., was born December 18, 1857.

Joseph Sr. moved to Wellington, Millard County, Utah where he later remarried. His second wife was Ruth Ann Smith. She and Joseph Brundage were previously married in Nauvoo, Illinois, and crossed the plains soon after. Joe Brundage disappeared while they were crossing and was never seen again by any member of that company.

Joseph and Ruth Ann lived at Wellington (which was originally nicknamed "sucker town"). It was settled in the early days by a number of outlaws who specialized in stealing cattle from their neighbors. A dispute which arose in regard to the boundary line between Millard and Juab counties was settled by an act of the legislature in favor of Juab county by which Wellington became part of Juab Stake. In the spring of 1885 a number of LDS people from Scipio, Millard County, took up land claims on the Sevier River within the limits of what later became the Wellington Branch and when the Utah Southern Rail Extension was built through the canyon and passed through the little settlement Joseph Howe was employed along with others.

Ruth Ann had one child by Joe Brundage. Her name was Alvira who died at Scipio as a child. Ruth Ann and Joseph Howe and three children, Eliza Ann and Rodolphus, who died at Scipio, and Minnie Clarence.